Aims and Scope: Sophia Lucid aims to provide a platform for high-quality, original research that bridges diverse disciplines, fostering collaboration and knowledge exchange across scientific, technological, social, and humanistic domains. It seeks to publish innovative studies that address complex global challenges through interdisciplinary approaches, integrating perspectives from various fields to advance theoretical and practical insights.

The call for papers on each issue is based on a theme, crafted based on the pressing issues of the world we live in. The journal encourages discourse analysis, empirical studies, theoretical explorations, methodological advancements, interviews and case studies that provide cross-disciplinary insights on the focus area of each issue. Sophia Lucid welcomes original research articles, review papers, interviews, book reviews and perspective pieces that contribute to fostering a multidisciplinary dialogue in areas or contemporary issues from various disciplines including, but not limited to:

- Social Sciences and Humanities
- Health and Medical Sciences
- Business, Economics, and Management
- Law, Education and Learning Sciences
- Natural and Applied Sciences

A double-blind peer review process ensures the quality, originality, and significance of the published content. Sophia Lucid invites academic research papers from teachers and researchers across universities, colleges and research institutes.
